Tourist spot: 60 km away from Mumbai, religion collides with adventure

Tourists — nearly 1,500 people per day and over 3,500 over the weekends — combine the trek to Haji Malang with an onwards trek to Malanggad fort.

The climb to the dargah — which is nearly 1,500 metres high from the Malangwadi village at the foot of the mountain to the shrine located on a hillock — takes nearly two and a half hours to climb. (Source: Google Maps)

LOCATED NEARLY 60 km away from the island city, Haji Malang, a nearly 300-year-old dargah in Kalyan, is one place where devotion meets adventure. The climb to the dargah — which is nearly 1,500 metres high from the Malangwadi village at the foot of the mountain to the shrine located on a hillock — takes nearly two and a half hours to climb. Tourists — nearly 1,500 people per day and over 3,500 over the weekends — combine the trek to Haji Malang with an onwards trek to Malanggad fort, which, unlike the steps on route to the dargah, has a more difficult rocky terrain to manoeuvre.
